

1. Ashtavakra Geeta was written as a dialogue between the Sage Ashtavakra and King Janaka. It is also known as Ashtavakra Samnhita. Ashtavakra was the deformed son of the Sage Kahor and Sujata. In the versions available to us it is presented as consisting of 20 Chapters. We have rearranged the text and reduced the number of Chapters to four. It is an excellent book on nondualism. Janaka said to the Sage Ashtavakra, “How is liberation attained? Ashtavakra said, “He, who thinks he is free, is free. He, who thinks he is bound, is bound. A person becomes as he thinks of himself. A wise man lives in this world thinking, “I am Brahman. A liberated person acts without claiming to be a liberated person.”
